RMHP Extends Coverage for Dependent up to Age 26

Effective immediately, Rocky Mountain Health Plans is extending coverage up to age 26 for dependent children who are currently enrolled in a SOLO or fully-insured group plan. Dependents under the age of 26, eligible under RMHP's current eligibility criteria[1] can remain insured with no gap in coverage before the new federal requirements take effect.

New employer groups and SOLO Members enrolling with RMHP between May 1 and September 30, 2010, will also benefit from this extended age limit. Dependents must meet all other applicable RMHP current eligibility criteria to qualify.

We are pleased to be making this change now, months ahead of the implementation date required by federal health care reform.

On October 1, 2010, RMHP will open enrollment to adult dependents in accordance with federal requirements. At that time, we will also hold a 60-day open enrollment period to eligible dependents not previously covered.

[1] RMHP current eligibility criteria for dependents is defined as a natural born or adopted child of the subscriber or subscriber's spouse, or under the legal guardianship of the subscriber and in a parent-child relationship with the subscriber. A dependent child must be unmarried and financially dependent on the subscriber or subscriber's spouse. A Certificate of Dependent Status form, signed by the subscriber, is required.

As always, if you have any questions, comments or need assistance, please call your Rocky Mountain Health Plans or CNIC Account Executive.
